

After the Tornado

When the twister came, it may have blown away our houses.
But it didn't blow away our sense of community.

It may have torn trees out of the ground and ripped their branches apart, but it can't uproot our spirit.

It may have demolished buildings and broken our cars, but it can't demolish our hope.

It may have even snatched away some of those we love, but it can never take away love itself.

It may have darkened the skies for a moment in time, but it couldn't blot out the sun forever. Rest assured, light will shine down on our lives again.

So in the end, a tornado can create a mess of our lives and leave us picking up the pieces. But we still possess everything we need to get through this.

