Water is lots of fun to swim and play in, but it can also be dangerous. Many children drown in water every year. Sometimes kids die in pools that are filled with people; all because other kids around them may not realize that they are in trouble. That is why it's important for all kids to pay attention to their surroundings, and to know what drowning looks like.

Here’s one sign that a kid is in trouble: If someone is at the bottom of the pool but they aren’t swimming, or they’re underwater but don’t seem to be moving, that’s a sign of someone in trouble. If you see this, start shouting for help to let adults know that someone might be drowning.
